

Fighting the War

You can't hide, if you can't see the water rising, a tide that won't retreat, a tide that won't retreat.

You deny it, I can't sleep, coal clouds dusting trees to shining seas, wheezing in the breeze.

Who are you when everyone's drinking
Who are you to watch while we're sinking

Saying no, to fighting the wars of yesterday
We say no, we fear the war

How the coasts stood grey, flowing streams dried up, will my children live to swim in lakes I've loved, or hike the peaks I've trudged.

How we need to change. How the seed is growth, but we bleed with gain, and need to shrink not swell, not lead with buy and sell

Who are you, if everyone's drinking
Who are you to watch while we're sinking

Saying no, to fighting the wars of yesterday
We say no, we fear the war

Saying no, to fighting the wars of yesterday
We say no, we're the war

Breakdown

Saying no, to fighting the wars of yesterday
We say no, we're the war

Saying no, lighting the road for them to pave
We say so, we're the war
